

The President's National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee

Committee Member Biography

The President's National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee

Dr. Guy "Bud" Tribble
Vice President of Software Technology
Apple

Dr. Guy "Bud" Tribble is the vice president of software technology at Apple. Prior to rejoining Apple in 2002, Dr. Tribble served as vice president of engineering at Eazel Inc. Previously, he served as chief technology officer for the Sun-Netscape Alliance, responsible for guiding Internet and e-commerce software research and development. Dr. Tribble was one of the founders of NeXT Computer, where he served as vice president of software engineering. He was also part of the original Macintosh design team from 1979 to 1982. Dr. Tribble received a bachelor's degree in physics from the University of California, San Diego, and a master's and doctorate degree in biophysics and physiology from the University of Washington, Seattle.

